CALLOT CHERUIT

These new gowns charmingly express the slender silhouette and feature a number of the most recent and successful ideas of Paris.

Kasha Cloth

The lovely material by Rodier that all Paris is talking about and wearing is used, in a deep rich shade of yellow, for the simple long-sleeved bodice of the CHERUIT frock.

The skirt strikes a smart note of contrast, being of navy blue Poiret twill. Exquisite Egyptian-looking embroidery in gold and silver outlines its new low waistline and trims the bodice. Price $235.

The Fur-bordered Skirt that Paris adores this season is worn with unqualified smartness by the frock after the CALLOT model. An exceedingly lovely version of the straight chemise frock in malay brown mohair velvet-a new material with a blister-like surface.

Delightfully simple, it is unadorned save for a love-ly cut steel girdle worn low on the hips, effective me-dallions outlined here and there on the velvet with gold thread and the skirt's deep border of taupe wolf. Price $275.
